WE HAVE BUTTERFLIES!

Our butterflies have emerged. This week we will let them fly free, I'll try to capture it in photographs for you all.

The red marks you can see are not blood, it is called meconium and is something the butterflies leave as waste once they have emerged from their chrysalis.

Daily Tutorials:

I will be available for learners to call me for a one-to-one tutorial Monday– Thursday between 11.30 and 12.30. Learners will be able to call me if my initial on Teams has a green circle. If there is a red circle I will be unavailable for them to call me. I may with another learner or completing other College work. I will ask each young person who calls whether or not they have informed their family, to make sure that we uphold our high safeguarding standards.

Weekly highlights

I am really impressed with the quality of work your young people are producing. Thank you for supporting them to return work to me so that I can give them feedback. Work will be uploaded on Teams following their College timetable – Maths and English, plus a tutorial task on Monday; Digital Media, Sport and continuing with Careers work already set on Tuesday; Food life Skills on Wednesday and Weekly Newsletter Reviews on Thursday.

I hope that you have had a wonderful week. This newsletter is later than normal because we went camping! Don't worry, it was lockdown appropriate, in our garden. My daughter was supposed to go to the District Camp for Beavers this weekend. It has been cancelled so they held a remote camp. All Beavers created a camp (inside or outside) and slept somewhere other than their bed. We had a camp fire, made a camp flag and felt like we were on holiday. At 1.30am a family of wild boar (yes, you read the right!) came to visit! It was amazing and slightly scary.

I hope that you all remain safe and well,

Libby
